The Ward Building was built by University City founder Edward G. Lewis in 1910 to house the Academy of Fine Arts. It later housed a junior and senior high school and the University City School District's administrative offices. With the new lease by the School of Fine Arts, the Ward Building will return to its original purpose.

Arts on the move

The School of Fine Arts leases landmark for second home

The School of Fine Arts will lease portions of the historic Ward Building in University City beginning July 1, 1984, to consolidate the school's satellite sites.

The school, headquartered in Bixby Hall, currently has six satellite locations for classrooms and studios: Tyson Valley Research Center in southwest St. Louis County, near Eureka; a loft in the University's warehouse at Ninth and Spruce streets in downtown St. Louis; two locations in the Delmar Loop area of University City; the basement of Busch Hall on campus; and the Quonsets and two other small buildings at the west end of campus (near Millbrook and Big Bend boulevards).

With the new lease, the school will be consolidated into two locations: Bixby Hall and the Ward Building, 725 Kingsland Ave., north of the University City Library. The Ward Building will probably house such areas of the school as ceramics, sculpture and photography, although plans have not been finalized.

The University will provide a shuttle bus service to the Ward Building in synchronization with day and evening class schedules. Some office personnel will be permanently located in the building's reception area.

"This lease satisfies a long-standing goal to consolidate the school in a meaningful way," said Roger I.

DesRosiers, dean of the School of Fine Arts.

The Ward Building was opened in 1910 by University City founder Edward G. Lewis to house the Academy of Fine Arts. The institution closed in 1914 and was purchased in 1915 by the University City School District to house its junior and senior high schools.

The senior high school moved to a new building in 1930, and the district's administrative offices moved in with the junior high school. The building was named "Luther T. Ward Junior High School" in 1936, and in 1937 a second junior high school was opened. Although Ward Junior High School closed in 1949, the administrative offices remained in the building until September 1982. The building was listed in 1975 in the National Register of Historic Places, along with other Lewis structures in the vicinity.

Founders Day honors four faculty

Four members of the WU faculty will be honored with the University's Distinguished Faculty Award at the University's 130th Founders Day banquet on Friday, Oct. 7. The banquet, sponsored by the WU Alumni Association, will be held at the Chase Park Plaza Hotel.

The honored faculty are:

Leonard S. Green, associate professor of psychology; I. Norman Katz, professor of applied mathematics and systems science; William H. Matheson, professor of comparative literature; and Jess B. Yawitz, John E. Simon Professor of Finance. Six alumni (to be announced later) also will be honored.

Green, an expert on animal learning, behavior and motivation, uses animals to test and develop a wide range of theories on subjects as diverse as economics and self-control. In unique laboratory experiments, he recently worked with pigeons and rats to decipher the mysteries of consumer demand behavior and the negative income tax. Green is known as one of the most supportive members of the faculty, and last year was given an outstanding teaching award by the Council of Students of Arts and Sciences. He also was honored by the Association of Behavior Analysis for outstanding presentation of research.

Katz, known for his lucid and well organized lectures, has taught many courses in the Department of Systems Science and Mathematics, including one in engineering mathematics which serves the entire engineering school. He willingly assumes the responsibility of teaching extra courses each semester, and carefully guides the progress of his students, from undergraduates to doctoral candidates. He excels in his own research and is recognized for his work in finite element analysis, algorithms for parallel computations, numerical analysis and location and allocation of resources.

Matheson has intrigued and inspired countless students and colleagues. He has taught some 30 courses in the last dozen years, most of which have been new, interdisciplinary courses he designed and organized. He was among the first to recognize the intellectual advantages of joint teaching, and has taught with faculty members from nearly every department in the humanities. During his tenure as chairman of the Committee on Comparative Literature, he helped institute two new joint PhD programs which are unique in the country.

Yawitz is perhaps better known by academicians in top-ranking business schools than any of his colleagues at the School of Business. His research and writing have established him as one of the leading young

United Way campaign aids victims of high unemployment, federal cutbacks

With unemployment figures still high and cutbacks in federal funding for social programs continuing, this year's United Way campaign theme says it all — "Now we need each other even more."

More than 900,000 people (one out of every four) from the St. Louis metropolitan area and surrounding counties used the services of United Way-supported agencies last year. The 110 agencies in the area that receive funds from the United Way offer services ranging from family counseling to job placement assistance to treatment programs for autistic children.

WU's Child Guidance Clinic, the Central Institute for the Deaf and the Campus Y all receive funds from the United Way.

The United Way of Greater St. Louis campaign began Sept. 16 with a goal of $29.1 million. WU's campaign began Sept. 20 with a kick-off breakfast in Wohl Center for some 90 volunteer solicitors from University departments.

The volunteers watched a United Way film and toured two United Way agencies, the Central Institute for the Deaf and the St. Louis Association for Retarded Citizens, to see firsthand how funds are used.

Chancellor William H. Danforth and Thomas A. Harig, director of purchasing and general services and WU United Way chairman, welcomed the University volunteers at the breakfast and expressed hope that WU will make its goal of $110,000.

"Our goal for 1983 is well within reach if all WU employees take the opportunity to participate," Harig said. "Remember, no gift is too small."

Harig asked that all donors give their pledge cards, which are enclosed in the United Way packets recently sent to all WU employees, to a solicitor or send them to Campus Box 1069.

Harig noted that space is provided on the pledge card for employees wishing to contribute to a specific United Way agency. All pledge information is confidential.

"Remember that this is your opportunity to touch many people who need your help," Harig added.

Le Vineto open public affairs lecture series

The Public Affairs Thursday Lecture Series begins its fourth season on Thursday, Sept. 29. Victor T. Le Vine, professor of political science, will speak on "Africa 23 Years Later: Report from a Troubled Continent."

Le Vine has taught, lectured and traveled extensively in Africa. Two years ago, he taught and conducted research in Cameroon and neighboring countries including Gabon, Congo, the Central African Republic and Zaire. This summer he lectured in Africa on behalf of the U.S. Information Service in Upper Volta, Ghana, Cameroon, Rwanda, Somalia, Tanzania and Tunisia.

Public Affairs Thursday Lectures, sponsored by the Center for the Study of Public Affairs, are a series of informal discussions held on specified Thursdays at 4 p.m. in Eliot 200 C & D. They are free and open to the public. For more information, call 889-5852.

Commager to speak at fall honors assembly

Historian and educator Henry Steele Commager will speak at WU's Fall Honors Assembly at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 5, in Graham Chapel. Commager's lecture, which is free and open to the public, is titled, "Tocqueville's Democracy in America: One Hundred Years Later."

Commager is the John Woodruff Simpson Lecturer at Amherst College, where he has taught American history since 1956. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1902, Commager earned his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Chicago.

He has served as a faculty member at New York University and Columbia University, and has lectured and held professorships at universities in the United States, Latin America, Japan, Israel and most of the countries of Western Europe.

During and after World War II, Commager served on the War Department's Committee on the History of the War.

A member of the National Academy of Arts and Letters, Commager was awarded the academy's Gold Medal for History in 1972. A Phi Beta Kappa member, he holds honorary degrees from 44 colleges and universities in the United States and abroad.

Commager's publications include Growth of the American Republic; The American Mind; Tocqueville, Democracy in America; Britain Through American Eyes; and The Empire of Reason.

The Honors Assembly, first held in 1962, pays tribute to students who have displayed superior scholarship and leadership during the preceding year.

International panelists seek solution to world debt at WU conference

A conference on "World Debt: New Strategies Toward Solution," will open with a panel discussion from 4 to 6 p.m. Monday, Oct. 3, in Steinberg Hall Auditorium. The conference is being presented by the United Nations Association of Greater St. Louis in cooperation with the World Affairs Council of St. Louis and WU's Department of Economics and the Assembly Series.

Guy Pierre Pfeffermann, the World Bank's chief economist for Latin America and the Caribbean, will lead the panel discussion, which is free to individuals with a WU ID. General admission is $10.

The panel participants are: Cesar Duran Ballen, general manager of Banco de Guayaquil, Ecuador; Alberto Sola, financial representative of Argentina in the U.S. and Canada; and Jose Angel Gurria Trevino, director of external financing, Ministry of Finance, Mexico.

Following the panel discussion, Pfeffermann will speak on "World Debt: A Global Perspective" at 8:30 p.m. during a dinner program at the Top of the Sevens, 7777 Bonhomme, Clayton. The evening program, which is $25 per person, will open with a cash bar at 6:45 p.m. For reservations, call the United Nations Association of Greater St. Louis at 721-1961.

Dance classes offered by PAA

The Dance Division of WU's Performing Arts Area will offer three creative dance and music classes for children and young adults on 10 consecutive Saturdays beginning Oct. 8.

Children ages six and seven will meet from 9 to 10 a.m.; eight to 12 year olds will meet from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m. Both classes will be held in the Dance Studio, 207 Malinckrodt Center. The fee for each dance course is $35. Parents may enroll a second child for $25.

A special course for young adults ages 13 to 18 will be taught by Michael Kelly Bruce, artist-in-residence in the University's Dance Division, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in McMillan Hall, room 149. The course will emphasize pre-jazz dance training and is open to participants who have had some previous dance experience. The fee for the young adult course is $40. Parents may enroll a second teenager for $30.

Bruce came to WU this fall from California State University at Fullerton, where he taught composition, ballet and advanced modern technique. He has taught at the Harvard Summer Institute; the University of Southern Mississippi, Hattisburg; and the Repertory Dance Theatre, Salt Lake City, where he also performed with the company-in-residence for seven years.

To register or for more information on classes, call 889-5858, or 889-5885.

NOTABLES

Rodey Batiza, associate professor of earth and planetary sciences, gave a talk in early September at a meeting in San Francisco on ocean technology called "Oceans '83." Batiza's talk was titled, "Abundances of Hydrothermal Mineral Deposits on Seamounts Inferred from Seamount Petrologic Characteristics and Abundances." He also was appointed to the National Science Foundation Proposal Review Panel for Marine Geology and Geophysics.

Raymond S. Dean, assistant professor of medical psychology in psychiatry and director of the Neuropsychological Assessment Laboratory at the School of Medicine, was elected treasurer of the Clinical Neuropsychology Division of the American Psychological Association (APA) in July. He was elected a fellow of the APA in August and a fellow of the National Academy of Neuropsychologists in September. Also in September, he was elected diplomate of clinical neuropsychology by the American Board of Professional Neuropsychology. He recently was appointed to a three-year term as editor of the Bulletin of the National Academy of Neuropsychologists.

Udo Kultermann, professor of architecture, participated in a symposium on contemporary Third World architecture held on Sept. 15 at The Urban Center in New York. The symposium was co-sponsored by Pratt Institute and the New York chapter of the American Institute of Architects. It was held in conjunction with an exhibit on contemporary Third World architecture, on view at the Pratt Manhattan Center Gallery through Oct. 8. Kultermann's essay on the crisis of Third World architecture and his critical retrospective on African architecture since 1960, is included in a fully-illustrated, 84-page catalog which describes the show.

Ruth E. McDaniel, administrator of the Department of Otolaryngology at the School of Medicine, was elected secretary/treasurer of the Association of Otolaryngology Administrators (AOA). The association was formed on March 1, 1983. McDaniel is a member of the association's executive committee and will present a paper on "Strategic Marketing for the Otolaryngology Administrator" at the organization's first meeting Oct. 25 in Anaheim, Calif.

Anna Marie Schary, artist-in-residence in the Dance Division, Performing Arts Area, was the recipient of a Monsanto Scholar Award given by Harvard University in June 1983. She spent the summer working with the Harvard Dance Institute in Cambridge, Mass.

Have you done something noteworthy?

Have you: Presented a paper? Won an award? Been named to a committee or elected an officer of a professional organization?

The Washington University Record will help spread the good news. Contributions regarding faculty and staff scholarly or professional activities are gladly accepted and encouraged. Send a brief note with your name, position, department and activity to Notables, Campus Box 1142. Please include a phone number where you can be reached.

Monika E. Strong, associate professor of dental sciences, and Alphonse Peterson, associate professor of oral diagnosis and radiology, will be working with Ishiyaku EuroAmerica, Inc., publishers, in St. Louis. Strong will serve as an advisor in the firm's dental publishing program. Peterson has been contracted to write a book, tentatively titled Fundamentals of Reconstructive Dental Electrosurgery, which will be published in the fall of 1985.

Robert G. Thompson has been appointed assistant dean for clinical affairs at the School of Dental Medicine. Thompson previously worked for 30 years in the U.S. Navy Dental Corps. Most recently, he was assigned as head of the dental department at the Navy Submarine Base in Bangor, Wash.

Susan D. Videen, visiting assistant professor of Chinese and Japanese, recently completed a book, Heichu Monogatari and the Heichu Legend: A Thousand Years of Love, which will be published by Harvard University Press in late 1984. The book is an essay on the changing image of a legendary lover, Heichu Monogatari, in response to genre changes. Videen is teaching a course on "The Japanese Sense of Uniqueness: The Cultural Roots of Economic Success" through University College this fall. She will teach a course on "Borrowed Womb: Images of Women in Japanese Literature" through University College beginning in January.

Arthur G. Wirth, professor of education, had his book, Productive Work in Industry and Schools: Becoming Persons Again, published by University Press of America. The book examines democratic sociotechnical philosophies of work design and the implications for our educational system. The book is being distributed to members of The John Dewey Society and includes a foreword by Irving Bluestone, retired vice president of the United Auto Workers union.

McCormack, Baron & Associates, a management, development and consulting firm, was to purchase the building from the school district this month. The School of Fine Arts will lease most of the original portion of the Ward Building, and the gymnasium and woodworking shop in the "newer" parts of the building. The remaining portions of the building will be converted into one- and two-bedroom apartments and a commercial art gallery. The building will be renamed the Lewis Center.

The School of Fine Arts' lease agreement is for seven years, with an option to buy at the end of the lease period. McCormack, Baron & Associates will renovate the interior of the more than 28,000 square feet as specified by the school.

The E. G. Lewis portion of the Ward Building faces south and is a three-story French Renaissance style building.

Memorial service planned for Sandel

Memorial services for Thomas T. Sandel will be at 2 p.m. Friday, Sept. 30, in Graham Chapel. He died Sept. 13 after a long illness.

Sandel, 59, was chairman of the University's Department of Psychology since 1969. He joined the University in 1964 as a professor of psychology and as a research associate in the Computer Research Laboratories at the School of Medicine.

Before coming to WU, Sandel worked in the Research Laboratory of Electronics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He earned all his degrees, including a PhD in 1954, from the University of Texas at Austin. During World War II, he was a naval aviator in the U.S. Marine Corps.

He is survived by his wife, Katherine (nee Wetzel); his children, Martha Haimo, Tom, David and Karin Sandel; and his grandchildren, Aaron, Daniel and Yari. Contributions may be sent to the T.T. Sandel Memorial Fund, Department of Psychology, Campus Box 1125, Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., 63130.

Retrospective exhibit honors former art faculty

A retrospective exhibit of the art of the late Tanasko Milovich, a professor in the WU School of Fine Arts from 1943 until his death in 1964, will be displayed Oct. 9-26 at the St. Louis Artists' Guild Galleries, 227 E. Lockwood, in Webster Groves.

His widow, Catherine Milovich, professor emerita at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, assembled his paintings, drawings and batiks for the exhibit.

Milovich was born in Herzegovina, Yugoslavia. He studied at the St. Louis School of Fine Arts and later attended the Academie Colrossi and Academie Moderne in Paris, where he lived for two years. Returning to the states in 1929, he taught one class at WU and accepted a full-time appointment to the faculty that same year.

The exhibit is free and open to the public. A reception will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. on Oct. 9. Gallery hours are from noon to 4 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Family therapy, child care focus of social work continuing education courses

A 28-week certificate program in family therapy, beginning Oct. 5, will open the fall semester of the Continuing Education Program of the George Warren Brown School of Social Work.

David L. Cronin, assistant dean for administration and continuing education, said this fall's continuing education program "offers a range of educational activities for professionals in various human service fields who want to update their skills, examine new theories and techniques, and perceive old problems in new ways."

The 140-hour certificate program in family therapy is being conducted by Larry Kogan, a family and marital therapist and an adjunct assistant professor of social work, and Richard Laitman, supervisor of family therapy at WU's Child Guidance Clinic and a family therapist.

In addition to the certificate program, four workshops will be offered.

The 22nd Annual Institute for Residential Child Care will be held Oct. 10-11. Ed Rice, group child care consultant from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will lead the conference, titled "The Child That Nobody Wants: How Do We Help the 'Difficult' Child?"

John Schwartzman, an assistant professor in the Center for Family Studies at Northwestern University Medical School, will teach "Techniques for Working with Adolescents and Their Families" during an intensive one-day training workshop Oct. 14. A two-day advanced training program on Ericksonian hypnosis and psychotherapy will be held Nov. 17-18. Consultant Stephen Gilligan, who has conducted workshops in Ericksonian hypnotherapy since 1975, will lead the program.

Fitness program available to WU community

The Department of Athletics at WU will sponsor a Physical Fitness Program for the University community from Oct. 3 to Dec. 9. Emphasis is placed on cardiovascular endurance, muscle tone and flexibility, using carefully graded exercises, along with progressive jogging to promote one's physical fitness. Each participant progresses at his or her own rate, and exercise is prescribed based upon individual capabilities. A pre- and post-fitness evaluation to determine cardiovascular improvement and body composition measurements is included as an optional part of the program.

The program will be offered on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 7 to 8 a.m. under the direction of Rick Larsen. The fee for the program is $40, plus $20 for the optional fitness test.

For more information and application forms, call Richard Larsen at 889-5220.
